THE AGITATION for a shorter work week with no drop in pay is interesting. It isn't impossible. It has happened before in this country. We used to work 50 to 60 hours a week and our standard of living is higher now than it was then.

The secret is productivity. In the past, our productivity — the amount each of us could produce with an hour's work — was rising sharply. That's why we could work shorter hours without reducing our income.

SAFETY CONSCIOUS . . .

FOR EFFECTIVE TELEPHONE USE . . . Try to answer the phone by the second ring; speak clearly; identify yourself when answering; try to keep information close by if you have to give it out frequently; concentrate on speaking only to the person on the phone — not to others in the office; be sure you have nothing in your mouth, i.e., a pen or cigarette, when you're speaking on the phone; let the other person speak without interruptions; write down messages for others — don't trust them to memory; if you have to look up something, ask the person if he would prefer you call him back; place the receiver down — don't bang it; when dialing out, check the number if you are uncertain; keep a smile in your voice!
