WHO'S YOUR BOSS??? The following item was submitted by Southern Region's Lee Friesen, compliments of General Electric's publication Shreveporter:

Here's a question you could ask a thousand working people and never get the right answer. The question: "Who's your boss?"

There's only one boss, and whether a person shines shoes for a living or heads the largest corporation in the world, the boss remains the same. It's the customer. He is the one person who pays everyone's salary and decides whether a business is going to succeed or fail. And, he doesn't care how long a business has been around. The minute it starts treating him badly, he'll put it out of business.

This boss, the customer, has bought and will buy everything you have or will ever own. He's bought all your clothes, your home, your car, pays for your children's education, and your vacation. He pays all your bills, and he pays them in exact proportion to the way you treat him.

The man or woman who works deep inside the big plant in a production department might think he's working for the company that writes his paycheck. He's not. He's working for the person who buys the product at the end of the line. And, if the person doesn't like the product, it won't be bought. Eventually, if this continues, he fires the man in the production department. In fact, he'll fire everyone in the company from the president or manager on down.

And, he can do it by simply spending his money someplace else.

That's one reason why taking pride in the work we do is so important to us personally. Aside from the satisfaction that comes from doing a good job, it will help get us more customers.

Some of the largest companies that had flourishing businesses a few years ago are no longer in existence. They couldn't or didn't satisfy the customer. They forgot who's the boss.

PUZZLE CORNER . . .

A four-star brain teaser submitted by Ted Zielinski:

Ma Bell keeps changing my phone number. At least there are some things about my new number that make it easy to remember. First, both the old number and the new number consists of four digits. Second, the new number is exactly four times the old number. Third, the new number happens to be the old number written backwards. I should have no difficulty remembering it . . . now what the heck is it?
